p. 7

Vol. 32 No. 14 | collegianonline.com

Bob Jones University, Greenville, SC 29614

THIS ISSUE OF THE COLLEGIAN IS DEDICATED TO Mrs. Beneth Jones

BJU to enter annual Bible Conference

JO ELLEN WALKER Staff Writer

Every year, Bob Jones University's Bible Conference focuses on a theme intended to resonate with students, faculty, staff and otherswhochoosetoattend the conference.

This year's the me will be "Let Us Pray," and the conferencespeakerswillfocus their messages on prayer and its importance in the Christian life.

Society fundraisers in theweeksleadinguptothe Bible Conference provide studentswithopportunities toraisemoneyforthisyear's goal of building the recreation center in The Den.

Societyfundraisersarea fun way to get students involved campus-wide.

Insteadofhavingasingle event planned by the Student Leadership Council, society fundraisers make the effort more personal and effective.

See CONFERENCE p. 5 >>

BJU culinary arts students to offer Fine Dining

SAMANTHA VIERA Staff Writer

Studentscanenjoyanight ofelegance, culture and good food through the culinary artsdepartment'sfinedining event that begins today.

Fine Dining events will be offered for six Friday nightsoverthecourseofsecond semester.

In order to get the fine diningexperience, students needtomakereservations in advance.

To make a reservation, students should email Chef RobHansen, a faculty member in the culinary arts program, at rhansen@bju.edu.

Theyshouldincludetheir name, phone number, the number of people in their party and the time they would like to reserve.

Tickets are $20 per person, notincluding taxandtip.

Guests can choose to be seatedat5p.m.,5:15p.m.or 5:30 p.m.

Dining can expect a dining experience that will last for about two hours with six courses that will be broughtout individually.

The menu is created by the culinary students.

Each of the six nights of FineDiningwillhaveitsown theme. The theme for tonight is Italian.

Someoftheotherthemes will include French, Mediterranean and American.

As part of putting to-Students who go to Fine gether the menu, the stu-dentswillneedtomakesure all the dishes tie together and coordinate with the theme for the night.

Hansen said, "The dishes really reflect the region they're coming from."

The six courses will includeasoupcourse, appetizercourse, salad, intermezzo, entree and a dessert.

People with allergies or otherdietaryrestrictionscan enjoy fine dining as well.

Each menu includes dairy-free, gluten-free and shellfish-free options.

The Fine Dining event is run by sophomore culinary students.

This event allows them to showcase all the skills theyhavelearnedoverthe course of the culinary program so far.

Some of these skills includetimemanagement and communication as wellasmorespecificskills suchasmenubuildingand knife skills.

The students will rotate roles each night, allowing eachtogetexperiencewith all the different aspects of fine dining.

Hansensaid, "Platedservice, formal service is part of what [students] need to knowsowetrytorecreatea wayforthemtoseethatina controlled setting."

Thesepositionsvaryfrom waiting on the guest stotaking on the job of sous chef, the second in command of the kitchen, for the night.

See DINING p. 3>>

OPINION

COLUMN

IIC: MAX BURA

Tabitha Leaman Staff Writer

Slip. Snap. Sharp pain.

I tried to casually walk awayfromthedrivewayinto thehouse,limpingheavilyon my right ankle.

"Awwman1think1broke it," I muttered.

I felt a stabbing pain in my ankle as I tried to put weight on it.

(Actually, this was not the worst physical pain I've everfeltinmylife, butthat's a story for another day.)

"I definitely broke it," I amended.

I was right. Sort of.

Technically, as mall piece of bone had pulled away from the ankle bone.

(Actually, not the first timethathadhappened, but againthat's another story for another day.)

How did this happen? Well . . . it went a little something like this:

> I was 13 years old and See COLUMN p. 3 >>

The Collegian Editorial Revolutionizing the pro-life movement

"We've killed 65 million sincethen,"Paullsaacs, president of Savethe Storks, said in chapellast week Tuesday.

Isaacswasreferringtothe 1973 Roe v. Wade decision, gripping the entire student bodyinapassionatemessage aboutthemissionofhiscompany, Save the Storks.

What is Save the Storks? Forthoseofyounotinchapel on Jan. 30, this organization's goal is to inform expecting mothers of everyoption they have so that they can make the best decisions for them and their children.

SavetheStorkshasbuses that are fully-functioning pregnancy centers.

According to their website, the portability of these centersallows them "to operate anywhere abortion-vulnerable women are likely to be – outside of abortion clinics, on university campuses and at public events."

The pro-life movement hasbeenaroundfordecades.

Christians around the worldhavetriedmanydifferenttacticstotrytoconvinceothersthatabortion is wrong.

Butstillmillionsofbabies have been aborted since the devastating decision of Roe vs. Wade in 1973.

What are some of the things we as Christians can do to change the world around us?

Isaacsgaveseveralgood pointsexplainingwhichsolutionswork,andheevenmentioned a few that haven't.

Save the Storks, Isaacs said, is reimagining the movement for pro-life.

"We are for women, for moms, fordads, forfamilies," Isaacs said. "We love life because it's life, and everyone has a right to life."

Isaacs mentioned that those who are pro-life have putalotofstockintopolitics. "If we put all our hope and stock into [politicians], it's misplaced," he said.

We've tried persuasion, showing heart-rending picturesofabortions. We'vetried protests, and so much more.

Yet none of these stopped the decision in NewYorkthis January that now allows abortions up until birth, in certain conditions regarding them other's or child's health.

"Youcanbecomeangry," Isaacs said. "You can take up picket signs and hold up graphic pictures. Youcando nothing.... Or, you can be like Jesus."

Isaacs pointed out that Jesusbefriendedadulterers, cheaters, religious fanatics, deserters and racist teachers.

Jesusbefriendedsinners.
And without the grace of God, that's what we are too.
How can we change the status quo in the pro-life movement? By offering women hope.

"We need to meet these women the way Jesus met thewomanatthewell--fullof grace and truth," Isaacs said.

Isaacs finished by giving somestatistics of his organization since they began.

The first year they began, almost 400 women choselife for their children.

Since then, over 5,000 lives have been saved!

Four out of five women who board one of the Save the Storks buses choose life. And they currently have almost 50 buses.

"Andwe'renotdoneadding to the fleet," Isaacs said.

This is how we can revolutionize the pro-life movement, by showing hurting women the love that God has shown each and every one of us.

This is how we can save our precious children.

CHOLLEGIAN

Bob Jones University Greenville, SC 29614-0001 www.collegianonline.com www.facebook.com/BJUCollegian

The Collegian is the Bob Jones University student newspaper. The paper is published weekly with issues out on Fridays. For advertising information, contact Jonny Gamet (864) 242-5100, ext. 2973 campusmedia@bju.edu. All contacts © 2018 Bob Jones University.

EDITORS

Christina Laird Seth Johnson editor@bju.edu

STAFF WRITERS

Daniel Quigley Andrew Schmidt Samantha Veira Tabitha Leaman Jo Ellen Walker Jewel Schuurmans

SPORTS EDITORKayla Romeiser

PHOTO EDITORRebecca Snyder

PHOTOGRAPHERS

Robby Jorgensen CJ Billiu Joanna King

STAFF DESIGNERS

Mattison Davis Christiana Williams Troy Renaux Ben Clemons GretchenSeelenbinder

COMIC ARTIST

Max Burak

WEB AND SOCIAL MEDIA EDITOR

Jessica Teruel

ADVISERS

Betty Solomon Lewis Carl Hal Cook

AD MANAGER

PHOTOS: ROBBY JORGENSEI

Jonny Gamet

What is your biggest pet peeve?

TALKBACK

senior
ELIZABETH CAMPBELL

"People talking loudly on their phones in the dorm halls."

freshman STEVEN BOHIN "Getting cut off when driving."

junior ELIZABETH RANDOLPH "When people clean their ears while talking to others."

senior JAMES POON "People interupting conversations."

OPINION

>> DINING p. 1

SophomoreculinarystudentMorghannneSittonsaid thatsheislookingforwardto taking on the role of maître d because it will stretch her abilities a lot.

In formal kitchens, the maîtredmanagesthewaiters and interacts with guests.

Whileculinarystudents get a great deal of useful experience from fine dining, all kinds of students can benefit from it.

Hannah Delich, a sophomore culinary arts student said, "It's a really neat opportunityforpeopletojusthavea fancyexperience, wherethey don't have to go very far."

Febuary 8th Menu

Appetizers (choose one) -Bakedmusselswithchorizo

-Pancettawrappedscallops

Charcuterie board with house-made pickles

Soup

Roasted tomato with fried basil

Intermezzo

- Lemon sorbet

Entrées (choose one)

- Seared lamb loin Parmesan risotto Broccoli raab
- Hand-made manicotti with asparagus
- Sautéed sole Braised potatoes Lemon beurre blanc

Askley Mc Kay prepares food during class. Photo: Rebecca Snyder and the state of the state of >>COLUMN p. 2 at a friends' house.

I was playing basketball with my brother and a friend in the friends' driveway.

I went to shoot a jump shot and did not see the evil littlepieceoffirewoodunder my right foot.

Bend and snap happened—orbendandchip, on my mind: basketball. I quess.

Anyway, I tried to play it cool, telling my friends that I was okay . . . until my parents came to pick team. me up.

like a baby.

Soon, I was rocking an awesome rock-solid purple cast on my foot and leg.

My parents were conthat season. cerned about my comfort, whether I would need crutches or not and if we had enough saran wrap in the house.

(Anyone who has worn a cast knows saran wrap is needed for bathing while that opportunity, I have no wearing a cast.)

But I only had one thing

Iwas half-way through my second season of playing for a homeschool junior varsity basketball

I was pretty sure there I then proceeded to cry was now ay I was going to be abletoplaybasketballinthe foreseeable future.

> And I was right. I did not play at all the rest of What made things worse. I think, was the fact that the assistant coach of my team had been preparing me to be come se condstring point guard.

(As grateful as I was for idea what the woman was thinking. My only skill in basketballwasthatlwasn't bouncing the ball off my foot every two seconds.)

The five or six weeks thatIspentinacast, cheeringmyteammatesonfrom the bench, were a very tough time.

I watched as they had fun playing the sport that I loved so much.

It made me angry and a little bit bitter because I couldn't play with them.

Even though it was a tough time, those weeks were also a time of growth

At the time, I was a new Christian, having made a professionoffaithalittleless than a year earlier.

I had a lot of difficulty in understanding why God would take away my ability toparticipateinsomethingl loved so much.

Proverbs 3:5-6 provided mewith some muchneeded clarity.

The passage says, "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledgehim, and he will make straight your paths."

I knew that my situation did not make any sense according to myownunderstanding.

I realized that I needed to trust God and His plan for my life because He knows what is best for me, even if I think He doesn't.

There have been many momentshereatBobJones UniversitywhenIhavefelt exactly like that 13-yearold girl sitting on the sidelines wondering why God chose to do something in mv life.

There are times when I haveguestionedGodandhis workings in my life.

Butwhenthathappens, Itrytorememberthatthe same God who helped a moody teenager trust in His plan for her life then, is the same God who can helpamoody college student trust in His plan for her life today.

facebook_®

Like us to find web exclusives.

BJU – The Collegian

A Week at a Glance

Saturday

Dr. Turner's Last Concert

The Symphonic Wind Band will perform "The Best of Times" in Rodeheaver Auditorium at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 9. They will celebrate the career of Dr. Dan Turner, as he will be retiring from the position of director of bands after this academic year. Turner has been serving at BJU for 45 years. Four guest conductors will also perform at the concert.

Saturday

BJU track @ Furman University

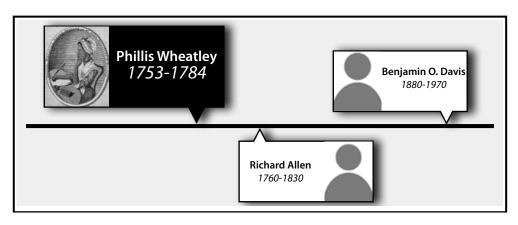

BJU vs. Furman University: The men's and women's track teams will race at Furman University at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 9. This Green Valley Road Race at Furman will be their first meet of the season.

Saturday

BJU basketball @ PCC

The men's and women's BJU Bruins basketball teams will play Pensacola Christian College in Pensacola, Florida, at 1 p.m. Those unable to attend the game can watch it live-streamed by going to www.bjubruins.com. Last time the Bruins played PCC here in Greenville on Jan. 18, the women's team lost 57-59 and the men's team won 72-54.

NEWS

PHILLIS WHEATLEY

On MLK Day this year, many BJU students volunteered in the nearby communityinvariousoutreaches, oneofwhichwasatthePhillis WheatleyCommunityCenter in Greenville.

Since BJU students just helped out at this center, we thoughtitappropriatetogive alittlemoreinformationabout who this woman was.

"Where e'er Columbia spreads her swelling Sails:

ToeveryRealmshallPeace her Charms display,

And Heavenly Freedom spread her gold Ray."

Phillis Wheatley wrote thesewordswhenAmericahad juststarteditsjourneyasanindependent nation.

Full of hope, Wheatleyenvisionedacountryofpeaceand God-ordained freedom.

Andyet, despite these beautiful lines, Wheatley was not borninAmericanorconsidered by many to be an American.

Slave sellers brought Wheatley to America when shewasabout7.Theysoldher fornexttonothing,gladtoget anythingforthegirltooweak for labor in the South.

Bought by a Boston family who noticed her intellect, Wheatleylearnedtoreadand writealongwithlearningarithmetic and other subjects.

At 18, Wheatley had writtenenoughpoemstopublish abook.Butshewasunableto find a willing publisher in the colonies. So Wheatley travelledtoEnglandwhereherfirst book, Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, was published in 1773.

AftertheRevolutionaryWar, WheatleymarriedJohnPeters andamassedenoughwritings for a second book, but she ran intothesameproblemoffinding a willing publisher.

In 1784, while her husbandwasincarceratedfordebt, Wheatleydied, leaving herpoetrythatrangwithhopeforher country'sfuture,acountrythat didn't publish her first book of selectedpoemsuntiltwoyears afterherdeathandonethatnever printed her second.

Round 3 of Scholastic Bowl completed today

JEWEL SCHUURMANS Staff Writer

Eightsocietiescompeted in the thirdround of Scholastic Bowl today.

Four teams have already been eliminated from the competition, and six more will drop in the following months.

After two more rounds, thesemifinalsandfinalswill beopentothestudentbody towatchandseewhichsocietywillbethe34thScholastic Bowl winner.

ScholasticBowlisatrivia tournament for socities held over the course of the academic year.

Societies volunteer to participate with a team of threeplayers, as corekeeper, atimekeeperandtwoalternates who replace players if they cannot participate on gameday.

Approximately once a month,games,attendedonly by competing societies, are held to test the teams with trivia questions stemming from the BJU core classes and the history of BJU.

Theteamwiththehighest number of points moves on inthetournament, and those points are added to their totalaccumulatedscoreinthe Bowl.

Thewinningsocietygets atrophybowlandmedalsfor each team member.

The win is also counted toward considerations for Society of the Year.

Dr. John Matzko, professor in the history department, said Scholastic Bowl was created in 1984 as an eventtoentertainUniveristy students after final exams.

"Backin the day... to get everybody's grades in, the grades had to be submittedonpaper,"Matzkosaid."That meant that the rewasgoing tobealagbetweentakingthe exams and graduation."

During that lag of severaldays, events were planned forstudentson campusbefore the commencement service.

"Students had to be kept occupied for three days," Matzko said. "There were concerts and plays, various kinds of things."

One of the events during these three days was debate, which dated back to thebeginningofBobJones University.

Matzkosaidthatbecause thevalueand content of debate fluctuated by the mid-'80s, the Scholastic Bowlwas created to replace it as a required event.

"Dr.BobIII conceived the idea of this game," Matzko said. "For years it was required, so we'd have 4,000 [to] 5,000 people watching the final round."

Matzko said the original listofquestionswascreated when 125 faculty members were each asked to write in their area of specialization.

See BOWL p. 6>>

Faculty Spotlight: Dr. David McKinney

TABITHA LEAMAN Staff Writer

As an entomologist, a college professor, a macro photographer and an authorityonspiders, Dr. David McKinney is a man of many interests.

McKinney is currently an associate professor in the biology department hereat BJU, and heteaches Essential Science.

McKinney first became interested in the field of science when he was a young boygrowingupin Missouri.

laterteenyearsthathefelt for sure God was leading him to entomology, the study of insects.

"Iwaslike, well, how does aChristian become a scientist?" McKinney said. "Because I really didn't know."

Sometimelaterhestumbledacrossawebpageabout Creation and bugs.

He emailed the man who posted the page, asking him if he was a Christian entomologist.

Themansaidno, but that heknewsomeonewhowas.

McKinney was put in contact with Dr. Joseph Henson, along time, now re-It it wasn't until his tired, faculty member in the biology department.

Dr. Henson encouraged theaspiringentomologistto pursuescienceandcometo Bob Jones University.

"So, God directed, and I ended up here," McKinney

Since then, McKinney has earned many degrees.

These include a B.S. in biology (2008), an M.S. in biblical counseling (2010) from BJU, an M.S. in entomology from the University of Nebraska (2011) and a Ph.D. in entomologyfrom the University of Georgia in 2017.

McKinney said that he enjoys teaching the biology section of Essential Science.

McKinney has taught this class that is required for more than half of the student population at BJU for over two years.

"We have some of the best students," McKinney said."They'refuntointeract with, and most of the mwork very hard."

He tries to make sure his studentshavealittlefunand enjoy the course.

Since McKinney owns over 30 tarantulas, some of whichhehousesinhisoffice, it is no surprise he has a passionforcollecting and studying the arachnids.

Infact, he has documentedtwoundescribedspecies of jumping spiders in South Carolina.

"My side of that [was] more photographing and collectingthespecimensand then sending them to the peoplewhowillmakethedeterminations,"hesaid."They havecommunicatedwithme thattheyarenewtoscience, and they are working on documenting them."

McKinney was able to personally give experts a specialspiderspecimenhe collected.

He said there is only one

Dr. David McKinney holds a tarantula. Photo: Rebecca Snyder other specimen from that McKinney said he found species, and it was found in New Jersey.

"Since I found one in South Carolina, it changed their perspectives," McKinney said. "Whether my name shows up or not remains to be seen."

thespecimensbecauseofhis hobbyinmacrophotography (the art of taking close up pictures of small subjects, like insects).

"I spent a lot of time with small spiders and a camera," he said.

Have any ideas for The Collegian? email to editor@bju.edu

NEWS

≫CONFERENCE p. 1

In addition to the servicesstudentsattendduring BibleConference, they also have the chance to attend the CoRE Conference if they want to.

This year will be the BJU seminary's second yearholding a CoRE Conference: workshops, speaking sessions and a book sale provide students, faculty, staff and others with valuable resources for counseling difficult and sensitive issues.

CoRE Conference

This year's CoRE Conference, entitled "Gender, Sexuality and the Church," is especially relevantin a culture increasingly confused about the biblical roles of men and women in the church, at home and in the world.

CoRE stands for "Connect, Renew, Equip," and it provides a model whereby conference planners and speakers can promote the most efficient and helpful conference.

Dr. Neal Cushman, associate dean of BJU's seminary, said the conference is important for instilling in Christians a firm understanding of what the Bible says about gender and sexuality.

"Wereallywanttoequip thechurchtobeabletoaddressthesekindsofmatters better," he said.

Cushman said the purpose of the conference is to provide counselors with valuable resources and a biblical foundation for lovingly and compassionately working through sexual sins.

"We want them to be renewed in their faith and in their commitment to the Scriptures and to the gospel," he said.

He said the conference will provide them with opportunities to make connections with people who have much experience in this area, find spiritual renewal and be prepared to help others work through these issues.

Each registrant will receive a bookbag at the end of the conference that will be filled with nearly $90 worth of books covering the topic of gender and sexuality. Outsided on a tions covered the cost of the books.

Speakers at the CoRE Conference include Tim Geiger, Dr. Stuart Scott, Ellen Dykas, Dr. Jim Newcomer and Dr. Sam Horn.

Cushman said that all the speakers have made a career out of the topics on which they will be speaking, instead of making them additions to their already-existing careers.

The conference will include personal testimonies from the speakers and sessions addressing specificis-sues like gender confusion, same-sex attraction, biblical guidance for cutting out sinful patterns and restoring broken marriages.

Cushman said the CoREConferenceties well into the theme for Bible Conference because they both teach a biblical response to what's going on in the culture.

The CoRE Conference teaches how to practically work through issues, and Bible Conference provides areminder that no change occurs apart from God.

"The only way that we can see God work in our culture is if God's people gather together and pray," Cushman said.

Bible Conference

Bob Jones University's BibleConferencethemethis year, "Let Us Pray," encouragesattendeestostepback from busy schedules and technological distractions to meditateon Scriptural truths and spend time in prayer.

Pam Cushman, BJU's events management director, said Bible Conference is a time the University sets as ideto focus on learning as much from the Word of God as they possibly can.

Pam Cushman said that Pettit chose this theme because many people today choose to spend any extratimeon social media and do not realize the importance of spending time with God in prayer.

"When we have a few minutes," shesaid, "weopen upour computers or our social media to see what's happening with other people."

Pettitwants students to reflect on their own lives and consider if they are spending as much time in prayer as they should be.

Society Fundraisers

Intheweeks before and during Bible Conference, many of BJU's societies raised money in a variety of creative ways to help fund the new recreational space for students that will replace what is currently the Bruins Shop.

Caleb Harter, a senior business administration majorand president of the Epsilon Zeta Chi Tornadoes, said that instead of holding a 5K this year, the Tornadoes are partnering with their sister society, the Zoe Aletheia Wildcats, in a fundraising event.

Together, the societies plan to sell heart-shaped whitechocolateRiceKrispy treats, roses and poems for five dollars in honor of Valentine's Day.

Harter said that planningfundraisershelpssocietyofficercrewslearnhow toworkasateamandmake events come together.

"It's a bonding experience," he said, "especially this one, because it's benefiting our own campus."

Harter said fundraisers are a great way to bring societies together and get the student body excited for the upcoming Bible Conference.

He said while they should be fun, the primary purpose of these fundraisers is to make money to contribute towards the Bible Conference project.

"If it only makes five dollars, it's a good outing, butitdoesn'treallyaccomplish the goal," he said.

This year, the Alpha OmegaDeltasocietyisraising money by biking from Greenville to Charleston the weekend before Bible Conference.

Omega will leave on Feb.8forthe222-milebike ride to Charleston.

Many Omega alumni andseverallocalbusinesses have pledged significant amounts per mile that Omega bikes.

Parker Nye, a junior Omegasocietymember, said that he was excited for this opportunity to raise money for BJU.

"Once a long-standing tradition, Omegais excited togoabove and beyond the competition to bring a fundraiser that is both physically challenging and ambitious in scale of donations raised," Nye said.

About 15 to 20 students in the society are biking relay style.

Other events include a volleyballtournament cohosted by the Beta Patriots and Theta Sigma Chi Colts in the Bob Jones Academy Gym, a speed dating activity hosted by the Tau Delta Chi Kangas the Red Room of the Dining Common, an ice cream bar on the Palmetto Green hosted by the Nu Alpha Phi Flames and a Pura Vida Bracelet sale hosted by the Beta Epsilon Chi Cardinals in the Student Center Mall.

Some fundraisers were sopopularlastyearthatthe hostingsocietieschosetorepeat them again this year.

The Kangas speed dating activity, for example, is one such fundraiser.

BIBLE CONFERENCE FUNDRAISERS Roses, Rice Krispies & Reasons I Admire You . . . Delicious Coffee International Food Festival Bob Jones Academy Auditorium Zoe Aletheia and Epsilon Zeta Chi Theta Alpha Chi Student Center Student Center 13th-14th 13th-14th 13th 11th_17th 14th Fudge for Friends Speed Dating Tau Delta Chi & Nu Delta Chi Student Center Red Room Ice Cream Bar Ultra Fundraiser Nu Alpha Phi Palmetto Green sidewalks around campus 14th 14th 14th 16th 15th Wonder: Journey to the Center Pura Vida Bracelet Sale Ultimate Frisbee Tournament Classics of the Science Building Beta Epsilon Chi PMA and CBA Upper Fields Student Center Science Building

>>> BOWL p. 4

Thosequestionswerethen compiled into a uniform list.

Every year Matzko createsnewquestionsandeliminates obsolete questions, formingauniquecollection for every game.

"The game, if you think about it, is very much a longlineoftweetsbecause[of]its shortanswers." Matzkosaid.

Kamron Hamedi, senior premed/predentmajor,said, "It's basically a way for us to test our knowledge of how wellwe'velearnedtheinformationpresented, especially through the core classes. I justlovethatacademiccompetition side of it."

This is Hamedi's fourth year competing for his society, Bryan.

"Formeit's the challenge: challengingmyselftoseehow manyquestionslcananswer correctlyworkingasateam," Hamedisaid. "Becausewhen youbuzzin, only one person can answer."

Hamedi said the games can get intense.

"It can get very competitive, especially towards the end," he said. "Trust is huge ina Schol Bowl team. You're trusting[yourteam]toknow whentheyneedtobuzzinfor your behalf."

Hamedi said the games aregenerallyaveryfriendly environment.

"At the end of the day we'reallheretohavefun,"he said. "We're all still students in this competition."

Anyonecanparticipateinthe gamesthroughtheirsocieties.

"If it's something you would be interested in, talk toyoursocieties'presidents and let them know that you're interested," Hamedi said. "Even if it's too late to jointhis year, there's always futuresemesterswherethey may need players."

The Bowlhas undergone somechangessinceitfirstbegan, primarily in the material covered in questions.

One of the newly obsoa lapidary cut?"

Onlyoneoutof10teams guessed correctly that it cutsstones.

"Students today don't knowwhatstudentsin1985 knew,"Matzkosaid."People just teach different things."

Another change in the Bowl is the active involvement of women's societies.

"In the first years there were never anywomenth atwere competing," Matzko said. "[In the] first round basicallyallthewomengot wiped out."

Althoughwomen's societiesparticipatedeveryyear, for the first 15 years it was especially rare for any to do well, much less win.

"Interestingthingshave happened in the last 35 years," Matzko said. "Women'ssocieties are doing better letequestionsis: "Whatdoes Schol Bowl teams prepare for a match. Photo: Rebecca Snyder now than they used to."

Katherine Matesesvac, captain of the Chi Kappa Deltateam, said, "Ilikewhen peoplegivemeweirdlooks like,'Whereintheworlddid you know that?""

Matesesvacsaidshehas neverregrettedparticipating.

"Even when I haven't been sure I'm going to win, I still enjoy it," she said. "I get energized on that sort of suspense.It's challenging, but I enjoy it."

Matesesvac said the semifinalsandfinalsarevery fastpacedandthatwatching them is intense.

"I'musually spazzing in the back," she said. "It's fun togo support, especially if it's your brother society or yoursistersociety, or even if you just want to learn random facts."

Schol Bowl teams prepare for a match. Photo: Rebecca Snyder

Concert honors Dr. Dan Turner's service at BJU

ANDREW SCHMIDT Staff Writer

TheBobJonesUniversity SymphonicWind Band will present a special concert, "The Best of Times," in honor of the long and impactfulcareer of Dr. Dan Turner, BJU director of bands.

The concert will be held in Rodeheaver Auditorium at 7 p.m. on Feb. 9.

It will feature four quest conductors and 65 alumni, creatingabandofabout 120 members.

Dr. Bruce Cox of BJU, Dr. Les Hicken of Furman University, Jay Gephart of Purdue University and Captain Joel Dubois, associate conductor of the U.S. Army Field Band, willbethefourguestconductors for the concert.

This concert will also premiere a song by Dr. Jess LangstonTurner,BJUalumnus and son of Dan Turner, titled "I Know Moonrise."

This concert serves as a sort of send-off for Turner, who retires this year after over 45 years of service in various positions around Bob Jones University and Bob Jones Academy.

Dr. Turner grew up in IIlinoisandlaterColoradoand desiredtobeabanddirector from the time he was 12.

Dr. Turner studied music at BJU where he met his futurewife, Jamie. When Jamiegraduated,BobJonesElementarySchoolofferedher a teaching position.

In the same year, while Turner was still a senior in college, School of Fine Arts dean Dr. Dwight Gustafson askedhimtostartabrassprogramatBobJonesAcademy.

Aftergraduatingin 1972, Turner was hired as the official head of BJA's band program.

Turner said, "I had no intentionsofstayingformyentirecareerinthesameplace, but that's how the Lord led."

Dr. Turner continued to work at the academy until Aftercompletinghisdoctoral studies, Dr. Turner returnedtoBJUasthedirector of bands for the University, his current position.

In 1989hebecamechairman of music education.

Besides conducting, Turner teaches a variety of lessons, under graduate and graduate-levelmusiceducation courses.

Dr. Turner played with the Foundation Brass, a group of faculty brass players, for many years.

He was also principle tuba for a local symphony orchestra for 27 years.

Heconducted the band foravariety of events, including at the funeral of Dr. Bob Jones Jr., an American Red Cross rally during the First GulfWarandatthetraveling Vietnam wall, both times it stopped in Greenville.

He has also led the bandtoplayforesteemedguests, including former Vice PresidentDanQuayleandmany more.

The University Wind Band has been on 18 tours in Christian schools and churches across the U.S. in additiontothehundredsof concertstheyhaveplayedat the University.

Dr. Turner also wrote a fully documented history of Bob Jones University in hisbook, Standing Without Apology, after completing a dissertation on the school's history.

Hehasbeenactivemembers of the South Carolina Band Directors' Association and College Band Directors' National Association.

He was also elected as one of the 380 members of the American Band Master's Association, an organizationfoundedbyJohnPhilip

Reflectingonhisaccomplishments, Turner said, "Those are things that God just does. We don't seek reputation or fame: we just every day try and do our utmostinanexcellentmanner for the glory of God."

Many members of the BJU music faculty studied under Turner, including currentassistantdirectorof bands Dr. Bruce Cox, all currentmembers of the woodwinddepartmentandevery member of the brass department except one.

Turnerhasseenthesestudentscometobegreatteachers in their own right. "It's iustbeenasourceofconstant amazement to me at what God's allowed,"Turner said.

Turner has always been very passionate about the value of his work and of music in general.

Hehighlightedthevalue of music to all college students."Musicdoesthingsto the heart that nothing else can do,"Turner said. "Music is second only to God's Word initspowertomotivateand teach and challenge."

Hesaidthatallthemusic programs at BJU exist to inspirestudentstothehighest level so that they can touch people for the Lord.

Turner said, "If I could challengetheentirestudent body, I would say, 'Stay involvedinmusic;Godwilluse it in your life and in the lives of others in amazing ways."

Theupcomingconcertis acelebration of God's graceand goodness. The program will include many favorite pieces of Turner from his years of teaching.

Dr. Dan Turner directing a practice of the Symphonic Wind Band. Photo: Rebecca Snyder and the Symphonic Wind Band. Photo: Rebecca Snyder and State of the Symphonic Wind Band. Photo: Rebecca Snyder And State of the Symphonic Wind Band. Photo: Re

The Collegian · Feb. 8, 2019 SPORTS & HEALTH

Students join wellness program

KAYLA ROMEISER Sports Editor

The School of Health Professions is opening its wellnesslab, located in the lower leveloftheDavisFieldHouse. tothestudentsofBobJones University for free personal training and body analyses.

A few weeks ago, an announcement was made in chapelandanemailwassent introducingthenewStudent Wellness Program to the student body. The announcementsencouragedstudentsto submitapplicationstoparticipateinthe 10-weekwellness program that caters to their specific wants and needs.

Approximately 15 students were selected for the Student Wellness Program, whichbeganattheendofJanuary.Theprogramoffersten weeklymeetingsandthreeto fiveexercise prescriptions, or workouts, per week.

Applicants were chosen basedonneed.Forinstance, someone with little gymexperience, fitness knowledge ormotivationwasmorelikely to make the cut.

Twostudent-interns,Kim RanckandJonathanGallant, serveaspersonaltrainersfor the program.

Accordingtothedirector oftheprogramandmember oftheexercisesciencefaculty, VickieBritton, both students arewellequippedforthejob.

"Theyknowwhatthey're doing," Britton said. Both internsareseniors, have had two practicums and taken necessary classes for the job.

The program consists of two"get-to-know-you"meetings and eight fitness meetings.Duringthefirstmeeting, whichoccurredthelastweek of January, the trainers and applicantsmettoestablisha friendlyrelationshipandsign paperwork.

In the second meeting, they met in the wellness lab and the trainer ran the applicantthroughaseriesofbody analysis tests.

The interns measured the applicant's fat to muscle ratio on the Bod Pod and oxygenconsumptiononthe VO2max.Theyalsoassessed musclestrengthandflexibility, among other tests.

Afterthefirsttwomeetings, thetrainersandtraineesbegan tomeetinthegymonceaweek forafullworkout.Thesemeetings have already begun.

During these sessions, the trainereitherencouragesthe studentthroughanespecially hardworkoutorexplainshow to do certain exercises.

Although only 15 of 40 peoplewereselectedforthe program, the benefits of the wellnesscenterarestillavailableforfreetothewholestudent body.

According to Britton, most other facilities charge a lot of money for the use of their fitness equipment.

In addition to the machinesmentionedbefore,the Wellness Lab offers the use of machines such as the Ergonometer, the Biodex and the Electromagnetic BFscale. The Ergonometer measures cardiovascular health; the Biodexmeasurespain,fatigue andmusculoskeletalleverage; and the Electromagnetic BF scale records body fat.

According to Ranck, one purpose of this program is to raiseawarenessoftheexercise science program at BJU.

Much about the field of exercisescienceisunknown tothestudentbody:themachines available for use and themultiplefieldsintowhich exercise science majors can go, to name a few.

Another purpose of the program is to allow exercise sciencestudentstogainhandsonexperiencebyinterningina familiar environment.

Forinstance, Ranckwants to be an orthopedic physician's assistant. Through this internship,Ranckgetstheopportunitytolearnmanypractical skills. She gets to learn how to work with different bodytypesandseehowbest to prescribe exercises.

"It's going to give meal ot of practical skills,"Ranck said.

The new program and openingoftheWellnessLab benefitseveryone.Withthe high-endequipmentandlab assistants, students are encouraged to pursue their fitnessjourneystoanewlevel.

Kim Ranck prepares for the wellness program. Photo: Rebecca Snyder

Find us on: facebook_®

SUDOKU

7								\bigvee	$/ \setminus V$
		9					3			1
					7	8	2	9		4 11/
X	7	1				3			4	1
\times	6		9			2	4		8	//
		8			6				2
	2		5	7		1			6
4	8			9	4
		6		8	1			2	3
		5		2			8		9	7

How are those New Year's resolutions coming along?

Many start the New Year with great intentionstoeathealthy. But thenSuperBowlparties happen!Andintentions start to fade. Keep the momentumgoingwitha saladmealseveraltimes a week. Salad is a super way to get your nutrients from some great vegetablechoices.Don't wreckallthatbenefitby overloading on the croutons, dressing and other toppings. Be sensible and get the most out ofyoursaladbystartingan awesomecreationwith mostlydarkgreenleafy lettuce and spinach. Then layer on lots of color-notlotsofadded calories!

By MELANIE SCHELL

NEWS

Beneth Peters Jones

July 19, 1937 Feb. 2, 2019

Beneth Jones knew how to act. Part of the Classic Players for more than 50 years, Mrs. Jones directed or acted in 24 Shakespearean productions and one Living Gallery at BJU. Her first major role was playing Lady Roxane in Cyrano de Bergerac as a sophomore. Not only did Mrs. Jones win the role, but she won the affection of Dr. Bob Jones III, who was playing Christian. Dr. Lonnie Polson, chair of the Division of Communication at BJU, said that her performance as Queen Margaret in Richard III was not only her last but also her best.

Despite the high stress of directing and acting, Mrs. Jones handled the duties with grace. Polson said, "The pressures of directing or acting in a major theatrical production bring out the best and the worst of those who participate. But in the case of Beneth Peters Jones, there was not a worst—only a best." Mrs. Jones was confident enough in her directing ability to bring on young, untried actors and give them a shot—one of those actors being Polson himself. For many alumni, Mrs. Jones was more than the "First Lady" at BJU; she was the face of dozens of 16th-century characters come to life.

"What a very sweet testimony of a life lived wholly and consistently for our Savior."

Susan Simpson (1981 grad)

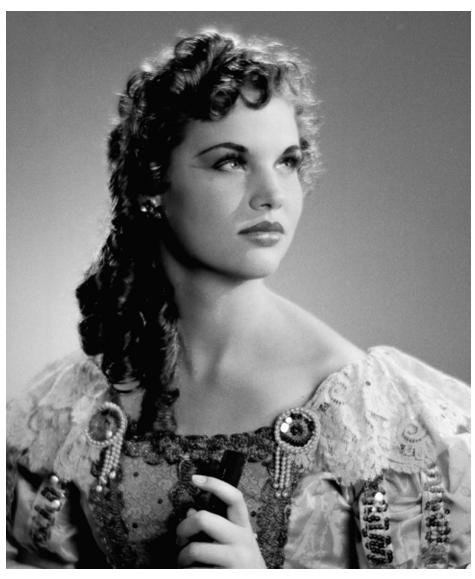

"I am so grateful for her ministry to me as a student at BJU and later as a struggling pastor's wife. She understood the struggles others face."

Janice Cox Cline (1981 grad)

"She [was] a gifted speaker and an eloquent writer, but her greatest gift to everyone she met—including me—was her kindness."

Trisha White Priebe (2003 grad)

"If you knew Mrs. Jones, you knew she prayed daily for the University and its students. For 58 years, she served, taught and encouraged students at BJU. As a student body, we acknowledge and appreciate the continuous support Mrs. Jones has shown to us."

Student Leadership Council

Mrs. Jones' impact on BJU students was felt just as strongly in the classroom. Mrs. Jones taught BJU speech classes for 13 years and a class for ministers' wives for 15 years. She also emphasized the importance of etiquette as a part of our Christian testimonies. Kathleen Oloffo, a 1989 BJU grad, said, "Today I was teaching my students how to hold their silverware with a giant fork & knife and thought of Mrs. Jones. We all owe so much to her & her commitment to shape us into adults who were mannerly and gracious. What an example of grace and beauty!"

Through theatre and teaching, Mrs. Jones had an obvious impact on the campus of BJU, but her influence spread much farther than Greenville. From her first book Sunshine on the Soapsuds to her most recent Meeting Him, Mrs. Jones wrote 13 books over the course of her life. She also spoke at numerous conferences and meetings worldwide. Dedicated to doing her best, Mrs. Jones would tirelessly tweak and revise speeches to perfectly fit every circumstance and conference.

